

SUPPOSED HORSE THIEF ARRESTED

Man Believed to be Harry McDonald
Wanted in Several States Held at Scottsburg Jail.

SEEN HERE BY POLICE CHIEF

Officer Abell Gave Instructions to Arrest the Man and He is Taken Up by Deputy Walker.

A man supposed to be Harry McDonald, an alleged horse thief wanted in Indiana and several other states, was arrested Friday at Scottsburg upon the orders of Chief of Police J. T. Abell. The police department received information a few days ago from Warsaw that the man was wanted there and a description was given of him. He is said to have stolen seven or eight horses.

Chief of Police Abell saw the man here and he answered the description given. He did not make the arrest at that time, however, but after reading the description felt sure that he was the party wanted. He returned to the place where he had seen the stranger, but in the meantime he had boarded a car south. Word was sent at once to the marshal at Scottsburg and also at other places along the road to hold him.

Deputy Marshal Walker, of Scottsburg found the man at that place and at once placed him under arrest. Chief of Police Abell went to Scottsburg Friday and identified the prisoner as the man seen here. Notice of the arrest was sent to Warsaw and an officer is expected at Scottsburg today to identify him. The stranger declares that he is innocent and that he is being taken for the wrong party. He claims to be a sewing machine repair man and carried a few tools in his pockets. He had no cards or other means to identify him as being an employe of any established company.

There have been a number of horses stolen in Indiana recently and the officials here receive a notice and description of some thief almost every day. It is said that a liveryman at Brownstown has a horse missing, and believes that it has been stolen. It left the barn Wednesday and has not been returned since. The man who hired the horse and buggy also leaves a board bill at one of the hotels.

This morning the police department received a notice from North Vernon that a horse had been stolen and is supposed to be coming this way.

Married.

On last Friday, Miss May White, who was employed as a domestic at the Silverman home on Second street, asked for a day off that she might visit her brother at Seymour. She went to Seymour, but she also went to Louisville, Ky., and there she was married to Harry Stevens, an employe of the Pennsylvania Railway Company.

When the bride returned she resumed her place at the Silverman home, saying nothing about her marriage until Thursday night, when she announced it and threw up her job.—Columbus Republican.

PEDDLER IN TROUBLE

Arrested After Trying to Knock Train From Track.

A stranger by the name of Brown was arrested about 1 o'clock this afternoon by Officer Thompson after he had delayed a Pennsylvania freight train by chasing back and forth in front of the engine and trying to choke the brakeman when he ordered the man to clear the track. Brown also found amusement in endeavoring to knock some of the cars from the track by hitting them with his fist. The man seemed to be crazed with drink and was locked up. He is one of the specimens of humanity who believes everybody is wronging him and said it hurt his feelings to be placed in jail.

He had a small grip with him which contained some cheap jewelry. He has been trying to dispose of it, and sold enough to get on a drunk. He resisted the officer when told he must go to jail, but his efforts to break away were unsuccessful. About his neck was found a razor tied to a string, but this was taken away from him before he had time to get to it.

W.R.C. ASKS CITY TO DECORATE ON 17TH

Members Suggest That Whistles Be Sounded as Twenty-third Regiment Approaches City.

ASKS MERCHANTS TO ASSIST

Veterans of G. A. R. Will Form Open Ranks on Street to Greet Young Soldiers.

The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. believe that the soldiers of the Twenty-third Regiment of U. S. Infantry should be received here with some sort of a demonstration. Both of these orders held meetings and the question received considerable discussion. The soldiers will arrive here on October 17 and will spend the night at the city park.

At the W. R. C. meeting it was recommended that all the stores decorate for the day and that when the soldiers approach the city all the factory whistles be sounded. This will serve as a welcome to the visitors and also as a notice to the citizens that the regiment is coming. A special invitation is given to each merchant to display flags and national colors upon that day.

The veterans held their meeting Friday night and while they are willing to assist in receiving the young soldiers they did not make any special plans as no instructions had been given them to that effect. They decided, however, that if it was so desired they would form open ranks on the public streets and greet the visitors. It was suggested that they march to the edge of the city and accompany the regiment to the central part of the city, but it was decided that too many of the soldiers were too feeble to march any distance and that it would be better to assemble near their hall. As nothing has been said to the veterans by any organization no other plans were agreed upon at the meeting.

It has been suggested that a welcome address be made upon the soldiers' arrival here, but as yet no definite plans have been made by any organization. A number of the citizens have stated that inasmuch as practically every town visited by the regiment has prepared some kind of entertainment or demonstration Seymour should keep in line and show the visitors what a hospitable spirit exists here.

MONDAY IS LAST DAY TO REGISTER

Voters Who Have Not Filled Out Blanks Must Do So On October 7th Or Lose Vote.

THE STATUTE IS IMPERATIVE

Law Requires That Every Application Must Be Signed by Applicant in His Own Handwriting.

The law makes it imperative that every person entitled to vote must register before he can cast his ballot in November. The law also provides that the registration board shall hold three sessions. The first session was held on May 9, the second session was held on September 6, and the third and last session will be held October 7. Those who did not register in May and September, of course, can register in October. The qualifications of a voter are as follows:

"Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years and upward, who shall have resided in the state during the six months and in the township sixty days, and in the ward or precinct thirty days immediately preceding the election, and who shall have registered either at the May, September or October session of registration in the precinct in which he lives, shall be entitled to vote in said precinct.

"Every male person of foreign birth of the age of twenty-one years and upward, who shall have resided in the state six months, and in the township sixty days, and in the ward or precinct thirty days immediately preceding the election, and shall have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, conformably to the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization, and shall have also registered either at the May, September or October session of registration in the precinct in which he lives, shall be entitled to vote in said precinct.

"A voter who has not registered at the May session of registration, shall make, or cause to be made, a written application for registration, which shall be signed by him and presented in person to the registration board in his precinct at either the September or October session of the board. It is required by law that blank applications shall be printed by the county auditor before the September and October sessions. Such blank applications can be secured before either session of registration, from the county auditor or the registration inspector of the precinct, to whom the county auditor is required by law to deliver blank applications for registration before either session of registration.

"The law requires that every application for registration shall be signed with the name of the applicant in his own handwriting in the English language, if he is able to write his name in the English language, and if not, then in the language he may be able to write. If he is unable to write in any language, the voter may procure some resident of the township to write his name for him on the application for registration, and the voter shall make his mark. But the person so writing the name of such voter shall also write his own name on the application as attesting witness. It is made unlawful by the registration law for any person to write the name of an applicant on an application unless he is personally acquainted with such applicant, and if he writes the name of the applicant on the application, he is required by law to write his own name in attestation. In all cases the applicant, whether he signs his own name to the application or has some one to do it for him, must hand his application in person to the registration board during a session of the board of registration in his precinct."

The registration law provides for no "ifs" nor "ands." Every voter is required to register before he can vote. There are several hundred voters in Jackson county who have not registered and unless they do so Monday, they cannot vote at the November election.

FARM HOUSE ENTERED

Thief Breaks Into the Snyder Home West of the City.

The home of Amil Snyder west of the city was entered Friday evening, but little of value was taken. The house was ransacked and several of the rooms were thrown into disorder by the thief in his hasty search. There was no money about the house and it seems that the thief contented himself with some old clothing and a razor.

Mr. Snyder and his mother were in Seymour during the afternoon and discovered the theft upon their arrival home sometime in the evening. It is believed that the thief broke into the house between 6 and 7 o'clock. He gained entrance into one of the rooms through a window in the rear of the house, but as the inside door was locked was unable to go into any other room. The front window was also broken which indicated that he entered the front room through that window. The thief left no clew, but it is supposed that the guilty party was a tramp who discovered that no one was at home.

LEADER DIES FROM WOUNDS

News Contained in Cablegram to Minister Castriello—Department Shocked by Report.

Washington, October 5.—Four American marines were killed and six wounded yesterday, when the American forces took the town of Coyotepe from the Nicaraguan rebels, according to a cablegram received early today by Minister Castriello from Chamorro, minister of foreign affairs of Nicaragua. American officials were shocked at the news contained in Minister Castriello's cablegram.

The cablegram to Minister Castriello, dated Managua, October 4, was as follows: "Masaya taken today by assault. We had one hundred dead, two hundred wounded. Americans early took Coyotepe with four dead and six wounded. Correa simultaneously took Barranca. Zeledon fled with followers, and was captured eight leagues from Masaya, wounded, and died later. Today I visited the American legation to express deepest sympathy for marines' death. Granada municipality requested marines' bodies for burial at that city. I beg you to express to the department of state my deep sympathy."

CHOLERA KILLING HOGS

Reported That Many Have Died From This Disease.

It is reported that the cholera has appeared among the hogs in several places in Jackson county and that during the past month many have died from this disease. This is the time of the year when hog shipments should begin to get heavy, but thus far a small number has been shipped. A local stock buyer said that he has not shipped a car for several weeks. He declared that the cholera was more general and was proving more fatal in Bartholomew county than in this county. It is said that hundreds have died there during the past few weeks. The disease can be prevented by proper care and it is believed that the stock raisers will be able to stamp out the disease before it becomes prevalent.

The hog market took a jump yesterday and buyers were paying $9.25. Several cars of cattle have been shipped from Seymour this week. The market price was between $4 and $5. Veal calves sold for $10 to $10.50.

As Miss Rose Whitcomb, daughter of Ezra Whitcomb of Acme, was returning from school Friday afternoon, the horse she was driving became frightened and ran away. The buggy was turned over and Miss Whitcomb received several painful injuries.

An infant child of Fred Lange near Acme was taken suddenly sick Friday and remains in a serious condition.

PRINCE PIGNATELLI HELD ON THE ISLAND

May Not Be Permitted to Land Here.

New York, Oct. 5.—The first cabin passengers were asked to assemble in the saloon and give their names to the immigration inspector as the steamship France of the French line came up the bay. The routine of inspection went on as usual until a slim young man, carefully dressed in brown and with a budding blond mustache that matched his blond hair, announced himself as Ludovic Pignatelli.

"You're Prince Pignatelli, are you not?" asked the inspector, and when the slim young man bowed, added: "Step aside, please; I'll see you later."

The passengers knew that the slim young man was Prince Ludovic Pignatelli D'Aragon, who had been twice a visitor in New York, and on both occasions added to the sparkle of the town.

The prince's troubles go back to a dispatch from Paris presented here on Sept. 29, saying that he had been told that his presence in France was unwelcome. He had been charged with running a gambling house in Paris. Commissioner Williams said: "The government has no information to give out at this time concerning Ludovic Pignatelli, also known as Prince D'Aragon, except that there is considerable doubt as to his right to enter the United States, and that pending determination thereof, he will be held at Ellis Island."

CRACK TWO SAFES

Train Robbers Make Rich Haul on the K. C. Southern.

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 5.—A north-bound Kansas City Southern passenger train was held up and robbed last night by three masked men, three miles north of Poteau, Okla. Two safes in the express car were destroyed with nitroglycerin. The bandits escaped with considerable booty, including money and registered mail, the amount of which is not known. The passengers were not molested, nor did the robbers molest the engineer or fireman, who remained under cover in the cab when they discovered the robbers were aboard.

The bandits kept the expressman and baggage man covered with revolvers while they blew the safes. They scooped up the money and valuables into a flour sack, after which they disappeared into the darkness.

APPEALS COURT WILL GET THIS

Storm of Protest Over Titanic Decision.

COMPANY IS GIVEN RELIEF

Federal Court at New York Holds That the Owners of the Ill-Fated Vessel Which Went Down Last April Are Responsible in Damages Only to the Extent of Their Surviving Interest in the Vessel, About $92,000.

New York, Oct. 5.—In the United States district court the Oceanic Steam Navigation company, Ltd., owners of the founder Titanic, have been adjudged to be liable for about $92,000 worth of all the claims registered against them as the result of the appalling steamship disaster of April 15 last. These claims for the loss of life and property due to the sinking of the Titanic aggregate over a million dollars.

Federal Court Justice Hough has just signed the petition filed by the navigation company in an action brought by the latter concern for the limitation of liability. In this petition the owners of the Titanic contend that they should not be held responsible for any portion of the aggregate claims beyond the amount of the company's interest in the lost ship.

In support of their contention the petitioners say that when the Titanic went down, vessel, cargo, personal effects of passengers and crew, the mails and everything connected with her with the exception of fourteen lifeboats and their equipment became a total loss.

The value of these lifeboats is estimated in the petition at $4,520. The freight money earned for the transportation of cargo carried by the Titanic on her fateful trip is placed at $2,073.13, while the prepaid passage money amounts to $85,212.41. Of this money actually realized by the petitioners from the first and last cruise of the vessel, $2,650.91 was spent in the transportation of the survivors. Exclusive of this latter amount, therefore, the entire aggregate value of the Oceanic Steam Navigation company's interest in the wrecked steamship is placed by this petition at exactly $91,805.54.

On these grounds the petition asked exemption from "liabilities, losses, damages, injuries and destruction occasioned or incurred by the collision and sinking of the liner" beyond the amount of the company's interest in the Titanic. The petition concludes by asking the court to issue monition to all persons claiming damages for loss or injury.

One of the requests of the petitioners granted by Judge Hough is that the freight moneys be divided pro rata "among such claimants as may prove their claims" before United States Commissioner Gilchrist.

It is anticipated that the ruling of the United States district court will bring down a deluge of protests from those personally interested in the result of the damage suits against the Titanic's owners. Those well versed in federal court procedure predict that granting of the petition will be carried to the United States court of appeals.

DENOUNCED BITTERLY

Process Servers Disguised Hear From General Sickles.

New York, Oct. 5.—General Daniel E. Sickles must answer another $8,000 suit. Disguised as messenger boys, process servers were admitted to the veteran at 23 Fifth avenue and served him a summons and complaint in the suit of August Hecksher to recover $8,000 on an overdue promissory note.

According to the attorney for Hecksher, the suit has nothing whatever to do with any of General Sickles's family troubles. Hecksher lent him the money in the regular course of business. He is enforcing collection only. The process servers said they had been trying to serve the papers for ten days, but could not get inside the house until they borrowed messenger boy suits. When they did enter they found the general and his secretary, Miss Wilmerding. The general denounced them bitterly, they say.

HOCKIN BLAMED FOR M'MANIGAL'S CAREER

District Attorney Miller Presents Government's Case.

Indianapolis, Oct. 5.—In continuing his opening statement to the jury in the dynamite case in federal court, some of the evidence the government expects to produce regarding the storing of nitroglycerin at Muncie by members of the alleged dynamite conspiracy and how that explosive was obtained, was given in detail by United States Attorney Miller.

At times the attorneys for the defense objected on the ground that Mr. Miller was arguing the case and not simply stating what he expected to prove, but the court ruled that he was within his rights. Mr. Miller read numerous extracts from letters that passed between officers of the organization in regard to the dynamiting, and showed how each was connected with some overt act in relation to the conspiracy. He charged Herbert S. Hockin, now secretary and treasurer of the International association, and John J. McNamara, former secretary, were the leaders of the conspiracy, and laid the responsibility of McManigal's fall at the door of Hockin, saying that McManigal was working in Chicago when Hockin called at the place to see him. He introduced himself as an executive board member and as a brother Knight of Pythias, and denounced scab labor. Finally he broached the subject of dynamiting, and when McManigal hesitated he overcame his scruples and thus he entered upon his career as a dynamiter.

Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or White Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors, or Growths; also pains in head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten day's treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in young Ladies, Plumpness and health always results from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten day's treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A SONG THAT LIVES.

To write something that will live and be sung by little children long after you are dead—

Gus Fischer did that.

You never heard of Gus Fischer—William G. Fischer of Philadelphia?

Well, no matter. He died the other day, and I want to say, though the dispatches gave his obituary just three lines, I should rather have written his one successful song than to be the author of the best seller of the season.

You may be world weary or blasé, you may have been out of Sunday school these many years, but—

Remember how your feet hung from the church pews halfway to the door? You see, in those days there was no primary department with separate room and low chairs and tables and group teachers.

Remember the superintendent? He looked so different in his Sunday clothes from week day Will Smith. He smiled so much more, for one thing. How snappily he banged his desk bell for order!

And there you are, dressed in your Sunday best, and you hold the hand of your little sister, and the other hand grips the big red penny for the poor heathen children over the sea.

How solemnly grand the little cabinet organ on the platform!

"Now, children," smilingly shouts the superintendent, "let us all stand up and sing No. 23."

And No. 23?

Why, that was Gus Fischer's song, which we all knew and all could sing:

I love to tell the story.
I love to tell the story.
To tell the old, old story
Of Jesus and his love.

You did not know what the "theme in glory" might be, but your childish treble rang out strongly and helped to swell the chorus.

Don't you remember?

Now, there's nothing classic about Gus Fischer's production, and it has no great melody. It never lent itself to the village band like the smooth melody of "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," but—

It is safe to predict that so long as there are children to sing it so long will that song be used.

Gus Fischer will write no more. Is it profane to fancy that, whatever may be his "theme in glory," he must sometimes pause and listen to hear the children sing his song of the old, old story?

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood, and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. THE COLONEL IS READY WITNESS

Former President On Stand
Five Hours.

NO DAMAGING ADMISSIONS

If the Senate Committee Expected to Draw Any Such From the Oyster Bay Witness They Failed, as He Ran Things Pretty Much His Own Way
in the Conduct of the Examination Concerning Campaign Contributions.

Washington, Oct. 5.—After having testified for five hours before the Clapp investigating committee, Colonel Roosevelt left the witness chair. If the committee expected to draw any very damaging admissions from the former president they failed. He ran things in pretty much his own way, and the impression at the end was that he had helped himself considerably, both in regard to the controversy over the Harriman and the Standard Oil contributions to his 1904 campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt produced a new document in the Harriman episode. It was a telegram sent by the railroad man to William Loeb, jr., Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, on Oct. 20, 1904, asking Mr.
Loeb to call him on the long-distance telephone. It was during this telephone conversation, according to Mr.
Roosevelt, that Harriman asked that Mr. Roosevelt help him in the New York state campaign and suggested that he come to Washington to see the president on the subject. Colonel Roosevelt contended that Mr. Harriman's visit was the result of this telephone conversation, and not, as Harriman himself has said, on Mr. Roosevelt's own invitation. Mr. Harriman has charged that Colonel Roosevelt at that meeting importuned him to raise $250,000 to save the national ticket in New York state.

Mr. Roosevelt explained why it was possible that the Standard Oil company may have contributed $100,000 to his campaign without him having any definite knowledge of the gift. He said that Mr. Bliss, the treasurer of the national committee, seemed to resent any inquiry on his part in regard to the sources of the campaign fund, and Mr. Roosevelt made no attempt to inquire into the details.

Took Cortelyou's Word for It.

Mr. Roosevelt testified under oath that Mr. Cortelyou had assured him over long-distance telephone and later in conversation with him face to face, that Mr. Bliss had given him assurances that there was no Standard Oil money in the campaign fund. Colonel Roosevelt testified further that Mr.
Bliss himself had made this definite statement to Mr. Loeb over the telephone, and Mr. Roosevelt's former secretary himself told the senate committee of his conversation with Mr.
Bliss.

Colonel Roosevelt declared that he emerged from the 1904 campaign without any pledge or promise, expressed or implied, on account of campaign contributions. That is the only rule that he laid down for Mr. Bliss and Mr. Cortelyou, and he did not attempt to interfere in their management of the details of the campaign. It seemed to be news to Mr. Roosevelt that 73 per cent of the contributions in that campaign were from corporations.

He was greatly surprised to learn within the last day or two that J. P.
Morgan had contributed $100,000. He had never suspected that George J.
Gould had contributed $100,000. He knew that H. C. Frick was a friend of his and had volunteered to make good a part of the Standard Oil contribution
if it was paid back, but the fact that Mr. Frick had actually given $100,000
also was news to the colonel. In fact, Mr. Roosevelt acknowledged that he had known absolutely nothing about the contributions to the 1904 campaign and had not sought to inform himself on that subject.

Colonel Roosevelt paid his respects
to Judge Parker in no uncertain terms, handled John D. Archbold more harshly than he has in any previous statement, called upon the United States senate to hurl Boies Penrose from that body, and told the investigating committee that it was confronted with the duty of calling upon Charles D. Hilles, Mr. Taft's manager, to prove the charges that he has been making in regard to the size of the Roosevelt pre-convention fund or forever hide his face in shame. The colonel was in first-class form and seemed to be pleased with his experience before the committee.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

PUTTING UP QUINCES.

In preserving quinces to look white allow to every pound and a half of fruit one pound of the best lump sugar. Make a sirup of the sugar and boil it well. Pare and slice the fruit and boil it in the sirup quickly. When it begins to look clear, pour in a half pint of quince juice and boil until thick. Take off the seum with a silver spoon.

To make the juice pare the quinces and cut the core from the fruit and wash it. Strain the juice through a muslin bag. To every half pint allow one pound of sugar. Let it stand four hours before using.

An Old Recipe.

Preserved Quinces.—Pare, quarter
and core the fruit, saving the skins.
Put the quinces over the fire with water enough to cover and simmer till soft. Do not let them cook till they break. Take out the fruit and spread on dishes to cool; add the parings and cores to the water in which the quinces were boiled and stew it an hour; then strain through a jelly bag and to each pint of this liquor allow a pound of sugar. Boil and skim this, then put in the fruit and boil fifteen minutes.
Take all off the fire and let it stand in a deep dish twenty-four hours. Then drain off the sirup and let it boil, put in the quinces and boil fifteen minutes.
Take out the fruit again and spread on dishes; boil the sirup down to nearly a jelly. Put the fruit into jars two-thirds full and cover with the sirup.
The quinces will be a fine deep red color.

A Winter Dainty.

Quince Marmalade.—Pare and quarter
the quinces and add to them their weight in sugar. To four pounds of the sugar allow a quart of water. Boil and skim. Have ready four pounds of quinces, made tender in the following manner: Lay the fruit in a stone jar, with a teaspoonful of water at the bottom, and pack them with sugar between each layer. Cover the jar, set it in a slow oven and let cook until the fruit is a reddish color. Then pour the fruit sirup and a quart of quince juice into a preserving pan and boil all together, breaking the lumps of fruit with a spoon until the whole is a complete marmalade. Pour when cool into glass jars, cover closely and store
in a dry place.

A Delicious Jelly.

Quince Jelly.—Take four quarts of quinces, wash and cut in quarters and add enough water to cover, boil till soft, then put in a bag and let drain all night. Add a cupful of sugar to every cupful of juice. Boil until a little on saucer thickens.

THEATRICAL SEASON

Will Open Here Wednesday With "The Girl From Tokio."

The theatrical season will open in Seymour, Wednesday night, October 9th, at the Majestic theater with the presentation of the comedy, "The Girl From Tokio." The play is staged by a good company and is an amusing farce adapted from the German of Robert Bohl. Manager W. W. Hagleton desired to book a strong play for the opening night and is especially pleased with the company.

The play is full of good, clean humor and is thoroughly up-to-date. The company played at Indianapolis this week and the play is highly commended. It is the story of a family misunderstanding which arises over the employment of a governess. Many comical situations occur which keep the audience in a roar of laughter.

Musical.

The Webster-Kingman Concert Co., consisting of Miss Jane K. Webster, coloratura soprano, Tracy Jay Kingman, baritone, Mathias R. Oliver, violinist, Walter Kursteiner, flutist, and Marie L. Ferguson, accompanist, will give an evening's entertainment at the Progressive Music Co.'s music room October 11th. These well known musicians will give a concert at Indianapolis, on October 10th, and secured for an evening's entertainment here through some friends of Miss Webster. The entertainment will be a treat for the music lovers of this city. Further notice will be given later.

MAY PLEAD INSANITY.

Trial of Mrs. Maude Ping Will Start Thursday.

Mrs. Maude Ping, who is charged with killing her husband at Bedford several months ago, will be placed on trial Thursday. It is believed that she will try to gain her freedom upon the grounds of insanity.

A dispatch from Bedford says: When Mrs. Maude K. Ping is brought into court next Thursday to answer to the charge of murdering her husband, the defense will in all probability be insanity. It was stated this morning by E. J. Boruff, who is the attorney for Mrs. Ping, that there is every likelihood of the case coming to trial at the date set, October 10th.

If the case comes to trial at this term of court it will occasion a general surprise as it has been generally believed that the trial would be put off until the next term of court. Mrs. Ping, however, is said to have insisted upon a trial at this term of court.

One of the things that the defense will endeavor to establish is that Ping drove his wife into jealous insanity, by bringing another woman into their home and keeping her there for a period and by other acts which so aroused the wife that she was not sane when she took the life of her husband and then made an unsuccessful attempt to take her own life.

The prisoner, who at the first glance looks like a fourteen year old girl, masquerading in long dresses, has made many friends since her incarceration in the county jail. It is hard to imagine that the little pale faced delicate slip of a girl will in a few days be called upon to stand trial for murder.

F. W. Wesner is acting as deputy prosecuting attorney during the absence of Oscar Abel. Mr. Abel is at Shoals to attend the funeral of his brother, the late Charles W. Abel, who died at Ft. Bliss, Texas.

A son was born Wednesday, to Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McBride, of Washington. Before her marriage, Mrs. McBride was Miss Jessie Murphy, of this city.

Charles R. Hoffmann has gone to Pomeroy, O. to be present at the celebration of the ninetieth birthday of his mother, Mrs. Frederica Hoffmann.

Bruce Shields is sick with typhoid fever at his home at Rockford.

Pe-ru-na and Ka-tar-no

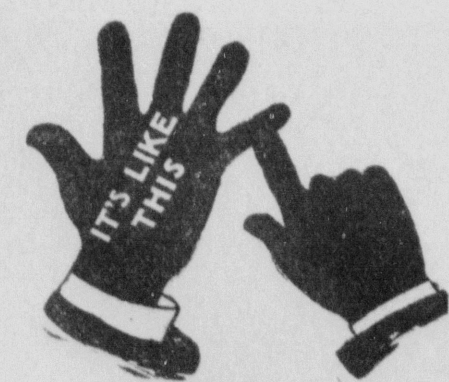

S. B. Hartman, M.D.

I have received a letter from a young lady, who asks me: "Is the old Pe-ru-na (Ka-tar-no) better than the revised Pe-ru-na?" Either medicine has its place. One is adapted for one condition, another for another. Ka-tar-no is a better remedy for some conditions than the revised Pe-ru-na. On the other hand, the revised Pe-ru-na is a better remedy for some conditions than Ka-tar-no. They are both intended as catarrh remedies. They have both done a great work in relieving catarrh, chronic and acute. Many hundreds of cases of chronic catarrh have recovered while taking Ka-tar-no and the same is true of the revised Pe-ru-na during the last six years since its revision.

There is a difference, however, in the two remedies. Whenever catarrh is associated with constipation then the revised Pe-ru-na is the best. Indeed, this is exactly why the revision was made, to meet such cases. But where no laxative is needed, where the bowels are regular or inclined to be loose, then the old Pe-ru-na (Ka-tar-no) is the better remedy.

The revised Pe-ru-na is for sale at all drug stores. Those wishing to obtain Ka-tar-no, address The Ka-tar-no Co., Columbus, Ohio.

MONEY SAVING OPPORTUNITY

New Series "D" Co-operative Building and Loan Association Will Start Monday, Oct. 7.

Do you like to save money?

Do you like to own your own home?

Do you like to increase your business?

If so, it is worth your while to take some stock in the new Series "D" of the Co-Operative Building and Loan Association which will start next Monday, Oct. 7.

This Association is one of the strong financial institutions of Jackson county. It is the largest building association in the county. It is conservatively managed and the interests of its stockholders are carefully guarded.

The plan on which the Association is conducted is this: Twice a year a new series of stock is started. At these times any persons wishing to invest, subscribe for as many shares as they wish to carry. These shares call for an investment of 25c per share per week. The money thus accumulated by the Association is loaned to stockholders who wish to borrow, on first mortgage security.

Every three months the earnings are distributed to the credit of the stockholders in proportion to the length of time their stock has been in force and in proportion to the number of shares carried. This plan makes the investment absolutely secure. When the payments on the stock and the dividends which accrue, have amounted to $100.00 the stock is matured and the stockholders receive their money.

The plan is so simple and the payments each week are so small that they are scarcely missed week by week; yet in a little while a sufficient sum has been accumulated to enable one to purchase his own home, to increase his business investment or to do any one of a score of other things where some ready money will be helpful.

The new Series "D" will start next Monday, October 7. See the secretary, Thomas J. Clark, Opera House block, for full particulars and take as many shares as you wish to carry.

NEW SET OF OFFICERS ELECTED

For President, the Conservation Congress Chose Charles Lathrop Pack, Cleveland Millionaire, Who Is a Pioneer in This Important Movement—Resolutions Lay Special Emphasis on Conservation of Vital Resources.

Indianapolis, Oct. 5.—A pioneer in the conservation movement, Charles Lathrop Pack of Cleveland, O., was elected president of the National Conservation congress for the ensuing year. Other officers elected are: Vice president, Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St.
Louis, former president of the General
Federation of Women's Clubs; executive secretary, Thomas R. Shipp of Indianapolis; assistant secretary, James C. Gipe of Washington, D. C., and treasurer, D. Austin Latchaw of Kansas City.

Mr. Pack was the first American of note to take up the subject of forestry in a professional way. He took training in forestry work in Germany before Gifford Pinchot went there to study. Like Mr. Pinchot, Mr. Pack is a millionaire. These two men were among the first to start the conservation movement in the United States.

Mr. Shipp, whose home is in Indianapolis, has been identified with the organized conservation movement since its beginning and has done much toward helping make it a success. The constitution of the congress was revised in order that Mrs. Moore might be made vice president. As a leader in the work of the Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Moore has been of great assistance in getting the women of the country interested in conservation.

In accepting the presidency Mr.
Pack said there was a great work for the congress to do in years to come,
as the movement would keep alive for all time to come. He proposed three cheers for J. B. White, the retiring president, and they were given with a will.

Resolutions Adopted.

Resolutions embracing the various departments of conservation were then adopted. The resolutions committee, of which Walter H. Page of New York is chairman, worked hard for a couple of days to express the purposes of the congress in the shortest form possible.
The resolutions put emphasis on the importance of the conservation of vital resources, and the health of the people. Other matters embrace: The establishment of a national department of health; accurate registration of births and deaths; measures for preventing births of hereditarily defective children; safeguarding of the health of industrial workers; discouragement of child labor; advanced methods of sewage disposal; uniform legislation regulating the refrigeration of perishable foodstuffs; protection of migratory birds by federal laws; propaganda and preservation of food fishes; a general series of state and national land surveys; approving the withdrawal of public lands pending classification; recommending the work of the federal forest service; protection of forests from fires when necessary by federal troops; uniform state activity in forest work; moderate forest taxation; uniform laws for the betterment of mining conditions; public control of water power development; improvement of conditions in rural districts and schools; appreciation of the vital resources exhibit at the Indiana statehouse; praising the work of the officers of the congress and the Indianapolis people who helped make it a success, and other matters.

SLAIN BY ROBBER

Attica Woman Found Cruelly Murdered in Her Bedroom.

Attica, Ind., Oct. 5.—Mrs. Anna Crumley, forty years old, was slain in the bedroom of her home in this city.
Her husband found her dead on the floor in a pool of blood.

The walls were blood-stained and there were spots of blood on the ceiling. The woman's head was battered and there were wounds on the forehead and a hole in one cheek. The left arm showed the imprint of a man's teeth. Mrs. Crumley was in a night-dress and on the bed was a suitcase partly packed as if she were preparing for a trip. Mr. Crumley says that his wife always had $500 in money in the house. The money is missing.

The bedroom door had been locked,
but it had been forced open. The lock had been broken and there were finger prints of blood on the walls of the stairway.

Gilbert Crumley, the slain woman's husband, is being held by the coroner pending an investigation.

Deadly Quarrel Over Woman.

of a quarrel between three rival lovers

by William Thompson and Arthur Willis, two colored boys of Indianapolis who are employed here. All were at a dance and when the woman started dancing with Thompson and Davis, Riley started a quarrel. Thompson and Davis were arrested.

The evening was a kaleidoscopic whirl, and I was a little giddy with the rush of events after the first awful time on the stairs. I managed to look after Mr. Abbott—at least it developed that he looked after me; he was that sort—on a little balcony where we could get away from the mob and talk poetical cabbages, until Laura came to look after him herself, and an '09 took me away to dance.

Out of the whirl two things were distinct, like beacon lights shining through a mist. One was His Grace, the Duc de Trouville. I suppose I should have been frightened talking, French at that, with a real live duke who traveled with a retinue, and even in the jam always had a cleared space about him like a charmed circle, but from the moment he bowed low over my hand in acknowledgement of my name all fear vanished in a vague idea that somewhere before I had seen him. He was not extraordinary in appearance. He was exactly one's idea of a French duke; small, dapper, distinctly foreign in dress and manner, with a precise mustache and a pompadour.

I searched my memory. America? Of course not. England? No. The continent? Perhaps. But where? How? When? Was the name familiar? In the first flush of my awe of him I couldn't say. Why should I remember him? I couldn't answer that, and it worried me.

The other distinct thing was a little indisposition on the part of Miss Agazziz, which amounted to nothing at the time, but which developed into a mystery. She complained of feeling faint while dancing with His Grace, and they came upon the balcony where Mr. Abbott and I were talking. She recovered immediately when Mr. Abbott brought a glass of water, but His Grace meanwhile was very much excited in a jumble of awfully poor English and graceful French. Later, when the evening was all over—and a goodly portion of the morning, too—and I had gone, absolutely exhausted and entirely happy, to my sitting-room, the door of which was open as we had left it between Laura's suite and mine, I stumbled on rather a tense scene.

Natalie was draped languidly upon a chair in the center of Laura's pretty white and gold room, while Laura stood rigidly by a window, and Mrs. Hazard sat rather upright in a chair hardly proportioned to her short legs, with a pucker between her eyes that was most unusual.

"I couldn't have lost it," Natalie was saying. "I'm too particular about the clasp. It's a patent affair and has to be undone."

"But my dear child," expostulated Mrs. Hazard, "even patent affairs can be defective. I had the servants search the rooms thoroughly and the yard beneath the balcony, under the all-seeing eyes of a detective, but we will search more thoroughly tomorrow. I myself questioned here and there, but of course if any one had found it they would have come directly to me. You can't imagine how it distresses me."

I didn't know whether to close the door or not. I moved a chair with a bump to let them know I was there, and Laura called to me.

"What is it?" I asked, joining them. "Can I help?"

"Natalie has lost a bracelet," Laura answered me, "a most valuable one. She missed it after she was on the balcony. You were there, Loulie."

"Why, yes, with Mr. Abbott." I looked from one to the other, and my gaze came to rest upon Laura's distressed face. "Mr. Abbott went for a glass of water while His Grace and I unfasted Miss Agazziz's gloves and chafed her wrists."

It seemed an awfully long minute before any one said anything else. "Natalie, do you think any one took it?" Laura demanded.

"Why, of course not?" Natalie replied. But as that rather belied her former statement no one believed her. "My dear," Mrs. Hazard said, "there were detectives all over the place."

"If you couldn't have lost it, Natalie," Laura persisted, "there can be only one other answer. And if a thief, why take just one bracelet?"

Natalie arose. "I'm awfully sorry, dear, if I said so. It really doesn't matter. Of course I can't get another like it, because there isn't another like it in the world, or so many emeralds matched so perfectly. It came down to me from a great-great-grandmother, and has all sorts of history attached to it. But if it's gone—it's gone!"

She picked up her wraps and I hastened forward to help her, while Mrs. Hazard, in her decisive, direct way, went to a desk that stood in a corner of the room.

"How much was it worth, Natalie?" she asked.

"Oh, without the associations and the history, and the matchless perfection of the stones, I may be able to replace it for fifty thousand dollars," Natalie replied. "That's what it's insured for."

I nearly fainted. The amount astonished Mrs. Hazard, too, for she blinked and her mouth dropped open a bit like mine has a habit of doing, but she turned and wrote something, and when she got up she was holding out to Natalie a check for fifty thousand dollars.

"Deposit that in your bank," she said. "If we find the bracelet you may return it to me."

Natalie refused. But when the slip of paper was held out by a distressed and determined old lady she took it, folded it with long, slim fingers, and tore it slowly and gently into bits. The bits she let flutter into a near-by waste basket.

"I couldn't think of such a thing," she drawled. "Besides, if I don't find the bracelet the insurance company will have to pay for it."

When the door closed upon Natalie and Mrs. Hazard I looked at Laura and Laura looked at me, then my knees gave way and I sank into the chair Natalie had just vacated. The enormity of the thing flashed upon me.

"What did she mean?" I asked. My lips were dry and my throat felt queer.

"She didn't mean anything," Laura answered. "She is always losing things."

"But a thing so valuable," I gasped, "an heirloom. She lost that on the balcony, too, and—"

"She doesn't know; that's where she missed it."

"But she said—"

"It was rather horrid of her, too. I suppose she hates to admit she was careless with a bracelet worth fifty thousand dollars—without the association and the history, and the matchless perfection of the stones. Mother believes she lost it. That check amused me. Mother may not be delicate, always, but she's most effective. It was one way of closing the matter so far as we are concerned."

I got up wearily. The clock on the mantel was pointing to four. It was almost another day.

"I only hope," I sighed, "your mother looked sufficiently into my credentials."

Laura caught me suddenly in her arms and pressed her cheek to mine.

"I was afraid you'd say that," she whispered. "Loulie, I wouldn't give you for fifteen of Natalie. There, that's my answer. Now go get some sleep."

CHAPTER VII.

A Conference of the Powers.

I slept. But at eight o'clock my eyes popped open and refused to stay shut again. I wondered if Jo had had breakfast. I jumped out of bed to call to her. I got her just as she was sitting down to the table, but she promised to wait for me, and I hustled into my clothes. I wanted to talk to her about the duke and that lost bracelet.

But I wasn't prepared for the happenings on the marble steps at the front door as I emerged. A young man—a red-headed young man—who was evidently camped there, much to the detriment of his health—for those steps were cold and the weather still uncertain—jumped up as I came out, and from his clean-cut appearance and the bright smile with which he favored me I was sure he was going to sell me something. I was fully startled at what he said.

"Can you tell me, please, if the bracelet Miss Agazziz is said to have lost last night was really lost or stolen?"

I stared at him. I felt as if I had walked under a cold shower and couldn't get my breath. A reporter; a real live reporter!

"Can you tell me if the bracelet has been found?" he questioned, seeing that I was so astounded I couldn't speak.

I was scared blue. I never had had any actual experience with a reporter, but I had enough presence of mind to realize that I ought not to give any information about something distinctly Mrs. Hazard's business, or Natalie's. The only way I could do the right thing was by keeping my mouth shut. So I just smiled pleasantly and started down the steps—a man can't keep on talking to a dumb woman. Then, instead of one, I was face to face with a crowd of newspaper men. They popped up like corn over a hot fire.

"Can you tell us if the stolen bracelet was worth fifty thousand dollars?" came at me from one of the crowd.

I caught the trick in the speech and glared. It wasn't any of their business. They were crowding me uncomfortably against the railing, and I began to get mad. I wondered at myself at being able to keep my temper so long, but I was holding my tongue between my teeth to bite off any words that tried to get out. I had determined I just wouldn't speak. Suddenly a thought struck me. Mrs. Hazard would get up in the middle of the night to see a reporter. I pointed to the front door, hoping somebody would catch my meaning.

"Oh, Mrs. Hazard would see us if we could get to her," one of the crowd told me. "Would you be so kind as to tell her that time files and the afternoon papers won't wait?"

I merely tried to push my way down the steps, for Jo was holding breakfast. "Oh, I say, Miss Codman!" Some one actually knew my name. I almost took the end of my tongue off to keep from answering; it's so natural to answer to one's name. Then I saw the purpose of it. I was looking straight into a camera.

"Oh, please don't!" I shrieked, and I ducked my head just as the click sounded.

"I Ducked My Head Just as the Click Sounded."

I was choking with wrath—wrath is the proper word—and I had spoken. And in the name of sense what did they want with a snap-shot of me? But the way was clear. Everybody was looking at the camera man, so I grabbed at my hat to keep it from flopping and made a dash for liberty, running just as fast as my tennis wind would let me, with a string of reporters suddenly coming to their senses and running after me. It must have looked funny, especially when at the corner half of them realized that they had left the house unguarded, except for the camera man, who was hampered with his paraphernalia, and scurried back like so many jack rabbits. It was a race between the last of us to the little apartment where Jo was waiting breakfast for me.

I was out of breath when I rushed in and closed the door, leaving the reporters on the sidewalk outside. And of course I began at the wrong end, and told Jo the reporters were there and showed them to her before I told her why; then I had her scared to death between an idea that something had come out of the mine and that I had killed somebody before I could get to what it was all about.

"I hope they don't think you took that bracket, Loulie," she said, pausing with my breakfast in the air. I was awfully hungry, too, after my run.

"Of course they don't," I replied hurriedly, grabbing the plate before she could take it back. "That is, the Hazards don't."

"I won't have you stay where you are going to be worried by any such foolishness," she declared, pushing back her own breakfast. "It's quite a dreadful thing you're telling me."

"I don't think anybody in the family is going to let me be worried, and I haven't been accused of anything," I told her, "so eat your breakfast and don't you worry. They have been awfully decent to me. They don't like Natalie."

"But the son is engaged to her," Jo reminded me.

"I'm not so sure," I answered. "I've never noticed that he gets highly excited over her. In fact, Jo, if I were a little conceited I'd tell you I think he is already beginning to turn around and look."

"At you, of course," Jo said, with unerring penetration that would have made her a great lawyer. "I hope, dear, you won't make the mistake of falling in love with him."

"Well, I can't say," I laughed. "It's just as likely to be John Crowninshield. He's a dear, and I'm crazy over that gray at his temples; or Mr. Abbott, if Laura doesn't want him—he's so real. Then there are a lot of '09s, all dandy dancers and all right in a ballroom, but I'll have to wait and see how they'd qualify as the other half of a romance."

Jo laughed and leaning over patted my hand.

"Loulie, you're quite impossible, and quite capable of taking care of yourself," she said; and she pulled her plate forward and began to eat.

"Well, now, I'll tell you about His Grace," I descendered. "Jo, did we ever meet a duke?"

"We never did," she replied. She gave me a tolerant look as if she thought I needed humoring. "The best we ever did was a German count. We've only been connected with high society during the past week."

"But we saw any number of dukes and things at the President's salon in France. Phil Dempsey pointed them out. I remember he said they were so thick there you couldn't stir them. I believe he had to list them for the Herald, or something of that sort. Now think hard. Do you remember the Duc de Trouville?"

Jo's eyelashes swept her cheeks.

"I don't," she replied. "I don't remember any of them. Why?"

"Oh, nothing particularly," I had to admit, "but last night—well, I got the notion that I'd at least seen him somewhere, although he is so important, and I don't know where I could have seen him. And another notion, that I connected him with something as a reason for remembering him."

"You're rather vague," she laughed. "Did we ever come across a bogus duke?" I asked.

"No, dear, we never did, and be assured that the Hazards would never make such a mistake. And the newspapers wouldn't. He's genuine. Did you see the morning papers?"

She got them for me, but the mere glitter of the affair did not interest me now, or the columns about His Grace and his long line of brilliant ancestors who went back to the eleventh century. Natalie's bracelet was under another head and only referred to as being lost. I sighed. I really had expected something from Jo about His Grace; I didn't quite know what.

"Just what, particularly, have you in mind?" Jo asked, looking at me steadily as she always does when I begin to fish or beat about the bush.

"Well, His Grace was on the balcony with Miss Agazziz," I confessed.

"So were you and your Mr. Abbott," Mr. Abbott went for a glass of water, I reminded her.

"Oh, I see," she mused. "Loulie, you'd stand a poor chance against a real duke if that bracelet has been stolen."

"I suppose I'm crazy for thinking anything, Jo, or allowing myself to remember what Laura said about being suspicious of the duke's politeness, because she was only joking. But Miss Agazziz is so sure she didn't lose her bracelet, and I'm just as sure I didn't take it. It's insured, and you know the insurance company is going to do some investigating before they pay for it."

Jo frowned, then her brow cleared and she smiled at me.

"I've never believed much in people getting punished for things they didn't do, but if anything uncomfortable does come out of it, dear, be sure to tell the truth and stick to it. Mr. Partridge says it's the only way to keep from getting mixed up, and that a straight story is a pretty good proof of innocence."

I felt very much better after my talk with Jo, although we didn't get anywhere or solve either of the vexing questions. She had to go to her botany so I went back to the Hazards fearfully dreading that awful camera man at every step, and the cluster of reporters at the front door. But they had disappeared; I gained my room in safety.

Laura knocked on my door when she heard me come in.

"Are you up?" she called.

I opened the door before I removed my hat.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed. "You don't mean to tell me you've been out? I was going to ask you to have breakfast with me. We are a bit demoralized this morning; in fact we have been ever since we moved to the hotel, but we'll settle down tomorrow; then a breakfast gong at eight, and mother at the head of the table pouring coffee. It's her hobby. Have you had your breakfast?"

"Yes, with my sister," I answered. "I wanted to have a talk with her about—well, about that lost bracelet. Do you know I was set upon by reporters as I went out this morning, and a man snapped me?"

"Loulie! Wasn't that awful? Well, somebody has to go through that every time Natalie loses something. It was the Abercrombies last time. Mother had a trying quart d'heure with the newspaper men."

"Has she really lost things before?" I asked eagerly, "and is that why you're so sure about me?"

"Yes," Laura answered, "but I'd be sure about you anyhow." She sat with her hands clasped about her knees for a time, her breakfast growing cold. "I am going to trust you with something," she said finally. "It is a strange thing that each time Natalie has lost one of her foolish bracelets, Winthrop has been near her."

"Mr. Abbott!" I exclaimed. "Surely he didn't—"

"Of course not," she put in, as I paused. "If I thought anybody entertained an idea he did, that is anybody but Natalie, I'd marry him tomorrow to prove what I thought about it."

"Notwithstanding His Grace and a title?" I asked.

"Notwithstanding everything, except that he hasn't asked me," she laughed. "Each time the horrid thing has happened when I had fairly dragged him there. Doesn't it sound foolish?"

I nodded my head, amazed at this new turn of affairs.

"He went for a glass of water anyhow," I told her. "If Miss Agazziz thinks her bracelet was stolen while she was on the balcony, why—?"

"Oh, a clever lawyer could twist you all up on that, dear, if it's a point to prove he didn't take the bracelet. Thieves are usually prestidigitators, anyhow."

"What does your mother think of it?" I asked.

"She thinks it's all absurd and that Natalie is just careless. Things do get lost sometimes. Natalie has so many bracelets on that arm she doesn't know when she loses one until she gets home and counts them. You know my mother isn't anxious to see me marry Winthrop; she doesn't think we'd gee one bit, on account of his always wanting to mope in a garden while I always want to flutter about at teas and things; but she doesn't believe he's a thief."

"It's quite ridiculous," I agreed.

A little silence fell between us while Laura aimlessly stirred her chocolate and I took off my hat, sticking the pins back and forth into it, and that isn't conducive to the general health of spring headgear. I was thinking of that simple life Jo and I had been leading with no jewels to bother about; where the days were full to the brim of things to work out, and learn, and do. What a tidy little life it was, to be sure; tidy and comfortable and dear.

"But I wish I knew," I said at last, "whether Miss Agazziz really lost her bracelet or not."

"Oh, I know she did," Laura assured me. "Don't you worry; nothing ever came of those other lost bracelets, except bother with newspaper men and raising a still unanswered question with the insurance company. But if anybody makes it uncomfortable for Winthrop, I'll marry him whether he asks me or not. Then John will have to fight for me; and I'm sorry for any one else suspected if John takes it up."

"Meaning me?" I smiled.

"Goodness, no! She lost those other bracelets before you appeared on "Then His Grace—?" My heart began to thump as I put the question.

"Mr. Abbott went for a glass of water," I reminded her.

Mrs. Della Long Unable to Stand On Her Feet More Than a Few Minutes at a Time.

Pendergrass, Ga.—Mrs. Della Long, of this place, in a recent letter, says: "For five or six years, I suffered agonies with womanly troubles."

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) 250 State St., Lowell, Mass. All the great goodness and assurance of the Compound is yours for the asking.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

Cooking is a matter which concerns the whole family, and under modern methods and conveniences it is made so attractive the whole family is becoming interested, if not taking part in it.

"These biscuits are delicious; this cake is excellent," says the father. "I made them," says the daughter, and both father and daughter beam with pleasure.

It is a crime, with our modern agencies, helps and facilities, to have soggy biscuit, or wooden cake, or leaden pastry.

Royal Baking Powder has made home baking a success, a pleasure and a profit, and the best cooking today the world over is done with its aid.

EARTHQUAKES PROMISED

Hicks Predicts Frequent Storms During October.

Rev. Ira Hicks predicts there will be several storms during the month. His predictions are as follows:

A regular storm period, central on the 9th, covers the 7th to 12th. Great atmospheric disturbances are probable at this period. Severe West India storms are very likely, and the barometer readings should be carefully watched along all southern coast regions. Tidal disturbances are to be expected. Thunder, rain and high winds will visit many interior parts of the country, turning in northern sections to sleet and snow. An early cold wave, for the season, will come with the rising barometer behind these storms, sending frosty nights far toward the south. A very marked seismic period involves the 7th to the 13th, central on the 10th. Watch for reports.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 21st, extending from the 18th to the 24th. Look for decided fall of the barometer, approaching from western extremes, as early as the 20th, and during the 21st, 22nd and 23rd storm conditions will increase causing rain, wind and thunder storms to pass progressively across the country. High gales over the lake region should be apprehended at this time, with falling, inclement weather generally. A seismic period will naturally bring reports of earthquakes in many parts of the earth, from about the 22nd to the 28th, being central on the 25th.

A regular storm period will be in its first stages as we pass from October into November, that is, in western parts of the country the thermometer will be rising, the barometer will be falling, with growing cloudiness and threatening weather and during the opening days of November storms of rain and snow will pass in regular rotation eastwardly across the country. Each section during the progress of a storm period, first has a day or two of warm, fair "weather breeding weather," with falling barometer east of storm areas. These conditions are followed by rain or snow from the west, while sections west of storm areas have rising barometer, change to colder, westerly winds and clearing weather.

I Am Now An Old Man and Want To Retire

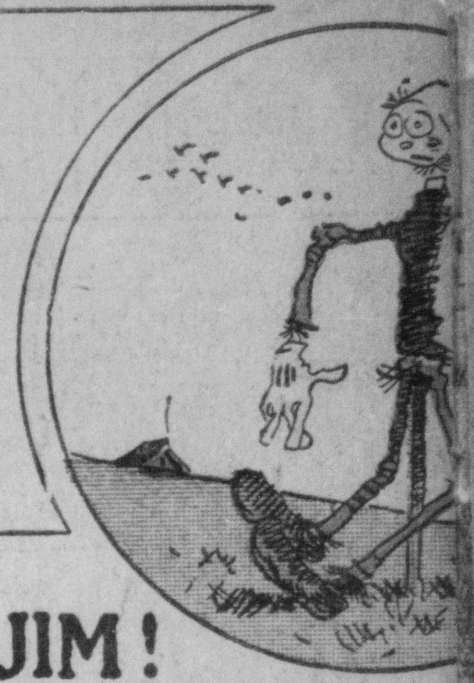

from farming. I have always made money on this fine 320-acre farm, and have taken good care of it. I don't want to rent it, so have decided to sell. It is 3½ miles from Benkelman, on main road, with R. F. D. and telephone. 5 room house; big new barn; nice young orchard, fenced with woven wire; shade trees in yard. All but 60 acres tillable. Top soil 2 feet deep. Finest neighbors in the world—all well-to-do folks. I want $40 an acre. (Some farms no better sold for $50.) That is the least dollar that will buy it. That is $12,800 and I want all cash. If you can't pay all cash, and need some time, my agent says he can arrange a $5000 five year loan. Write him for further particulars and photographs. He is Henry G. Matteson, Lock Box 986 Benkelman, Nebraska. This is a good farm and will make you a nice home.

ANNA BELLE'S AFTER SCHOOL CLOTHES

Dear Friends:—The other day Marjorie came in and happened to see me in an after school dress. "Say, Anna Belle," she said the very first thing, "why wouldn't it be a dandy idea to show your after school dresses to your friends?" It seemed like a fine idea to me, so here they are and I hope you will like them. I am also showing you an old pet hen we have and some bread, a pie and a cake which I made all by myself. Don't you think I did very well for the first time I ever really tried to bake anything? Of course, mama told me how and it was a good thing she was in the kitchen, for I almost let the layers of the cake burn. I was so busy looking after the bread and pie that the cake slipped my mind, and if mama hadn't been there to remind me, I'm sure it would have burned up. I tell you it seems quite a task to cook several things all at one time and fix them right, but mama says that after some practice it becomes easy to cook a whole meal of many different things without any trouble. I'll be glad when I have more practice then so I won't get so mixed up. Have you gotten your Certificate of Membership in the ANNA BELLE SEWING SOCIETY yet? If not you want to be sure and do so right away. Call at the office of this paper and you can get one, or if you live too far away just send a two-cent stamp and it will be sent to you. Address me care of this paper and write to me as often as you can, for I appreciate your letters so much. Don't forget to tell me of new things you want me to do or wear. Lovingly,

Anna Belle
